What's new in Little Dungeon Stories:

In the year 987 GC, the world was gripped in a state of war — a civil war, a planetary war, a silly rhyming war, whatever you want to call it. It was a time when the looming shadow of the Uzume empire had chased humanity into the darkest corners of the land, a time where the most popular method of transport was only a sturdy raft (with a few personal possessions stashed on top of it), and the most warring parties were factions of the Fisher Clan. The coldness of winter crept upon the land. Ice and snow grew thicker upon the ground as the wintry season gave way to the harshest months of the year, feigning as its tomb. The Fisher Clan took refuge in a small cave, better known as the Cave of Niggernerd — the Fisher Clan's throne room. The Fisher Clan was notorious for seldom meeting outside of their homes, far off in the distance, well kept and well hidden. The old elven king ascended the throne until two more times — the time of Ilaif, and after the last king, so-called, rule of the Fisher Clan. Their tale is quite a colourful one, much more complex, and you can find their account on page 4 of The Witcher History Book, but we'll not concern ourselves with that… For now, it's safe to say that the Clan's seizure of power had some negative repercussions on the face of the land, as well as most of their homes and homes on Niggernerd. The first time the clans had headed to the cave was, well, it had been a few years after their dynasty had inherited, and everything was less a mess than it could have been. Eventually, the years caught up to Niggernerd. The Cave became a cold place after the year 987 after a fire had stopped the original fire of regal origins. The pastel coloured, crazy colours, mouldy old photo album at the entrance on the cave's floor and the symbol of both Ilaif and Jaxa (the first and last king of the Fisher Clan) on the pillars — they were all irreparable pieces of the important history of the Fisher
