- Help... MoneroBrowser is a customizable browser aimed at privacy-aware users. You have heard about the problems relating to Net Explorer and Firefox. While switching to a different browser might seem a scary thing to do, the solution is to migrate to a different browser and the easiest way to do it is to utilize the existing browser for the purpose of migration. In the case of MoneroBrowser, the GUI provided by this application was used for such a purpose. Unlike other browsers, this one consists of a tabbed interface, where each tab is customizable. With the help of its tab-specific toolbar, the users can create their own layout, meaning that they can further customize the browser, making use of all the tabs. Once the customizing is complete, all the tabs can be turned on or off, allowing the users to pick their preferred ones and save all the configuration for later. This customization helps the users to make changes according to their requirements, helping them to accommodate their preferences. Another useful feature of this MoneroBrowser application is the fact that it features tab history, where users can check the previously opened tabs and use them later. Besides this, various other features, such as an option to install Monero to the system, advertisement removal feature, the option to use/unuse the Smart Folder option, etc. can be used, making this application quite useful for those who tend to use the browser for privacy reasons. MoneroBrowser App Features: - Tabbed browser with customizable properties - Tab-specific toolbar - Tab history function - Install Monero to system - Hide ads - Free version and premium version... The Ure2 protein of Saccharomyces cerevisiae is targeted to the bud site for its final degradation by the vacuolar hydrolase carboxypeptidase Y (CPY). Under conditions of high cell growth, in which Ure2 accumulates to high levels, Ure2 becomes proteolytically cleaved by carboxypeptidase. Here we describe the construction of a recombinant expression vector encoding the cell surface-anchored domain of Ure2 consisting of a 33-amino acid signal sequence, the RecA-bound cleavage site, and a 12-amino acid stretch of the C-terminal tail. The fusion protein was processed correctly to the cell surface, and specific proteolytic cleavage occurred in vivo. A mutant Ure2 protein lacking the signal sequence showed a prolonged half-life, indicating that the signal sequence acts to target Ure2 to the plasma membrane. Surprisingly, the protein became sensitive to CPY, suggesting that the signal sequence directs Ure2 to the vacuolar membrane, where CPY is localized. This may explain the reported physical interaction of Ure2 with CPY, and may also indicate that the signal sequence directs the final delivery of Ure2 to CPY.Big Brother: Celebrity Hijack Big Brother: Celebrity Hijack is a spin-off of the British Big Brother series. It is the first spin-off series in the Big Brother franchise. The series started broadcasting on Channel 4 on 15 August 2008, and began on 16 August 2008 at 20:00 every Sunday night, and ended on 3 October 2008. It was hosted by Des & Mel for the first series. The show started when Shayne Bennett, who was of "high-profile" and had previously appeared on Big Brother UK, demanded a move out of the house and the TV show to live in a big house in Devon with "all the trimmings". Channel 4 decided
