Star Trek: Discovery actor Sonequa Martin-Green said about offering her thoughts on the Star Trek franchise's current state. "If there's anything I've learned throughout my time being a working actor in this industry is that no one knows what they really want and what they really need. And I think that is true of the franchise." In an interview with The Hollywood Reporter, Martin-Green, who plays Starfleet Commander Michael Burnham, the show's titular protagonist, on Star Trek: Discovery, also confessed that she would love a role as part of a Star Trek series more than she would love to be the lead of a Discovery series. "What I love about this Star Trek is that, since it is a younger Star Trek, it is a Star Trek for a new generation. That is a really beautiful thing. And so, if I ever get to the point in my career where I'm like 'okay, I think I can play a character like this and I think I can do this,' then I would absolutely love to play a character like that." Star Trek: Discovery's second season premieres on Sunday, Jan. 17, at 9 p.m. ET/PT on CBS. Image copyright AP Image caption Mr Trump announced a deal with Mexico to replace the North American Free Trade Agreement US President-elect Donald Trump's campaign pledge to impose "border taxes" on companies which bring products into the country illegally has received a mixed response from the business community. Many of the firms have threatened to leave the US, but others have said they would be prepared to pay a border tax if it was reciprocal. What are the US president's options? The president, who takes office in January, has the power to slap tariffs on foreign-made goods under a clause in the US constitution, called the "antitrust" clause. But the president can only enact tariffs if they are approved by Congress. It's therefore highly unlikely that he would be able to apply import taxes unilaterally. What did Mr Trump say? Ralph Northam's desk this week, would bar employers with 15 or more employees from discriminating against lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender employees — including in hiring, firing, recruitment, promotion or discipline. AD AD Religious organizations, as defined in the legislation, are exempt from the law but may seek a religious-freedom waiver from the state. Supporters say nondiscrimination protections for LGBT workers are long overdue because the state does not have a law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity. They say that, just as Northam has worked to advance protections for people of color in the past year, such protections are vital in a racially charged environment. Opponents, meanwhile, say nondiscrimination protections threaten religious liberty by forcing faith leaders to support behavior that goes against their religious beliefs. They point to a bill the state House passed this session that would allow clergy to refuse to perform weddings that violate their religious beliefs, and House Republicans are expected to take up a similar bill this year. AD AD "Despite a record number of bills being signed into law to promote equality for all Virginians, Speaker [of the House] @RuffRuff19
