use CObject::initialize() inside of

OnTimer() If I do it in this way:

CObject::initialize(); // Do some things
here OnTimer(pCObject, arg); Is it

efficient? A: Can't see why it would be inefficient, since it doesn't access any data members of the class. There is at least one instance of the object, and only one timer, so it can't create more than one of that class. The constructor (which you have not shown) is a small part of class initialization anyway.
