ELDER GODS: BATTLE TREE Elder Gods: Battle Tree is a card battle game by adult gamers for adults. It is a card battle game featuring the battle of the gods. The game is developed by a group of talented fan's who have been fascinated by the movies and TV drama "Game of Thrones" for years. They have also been playing card games and have many popular card games in the past such as Hanafuda, Sanguosa, and even a game using the horse cards in the 1980's, "Dharan". However, they never get to make their ideal card game that is like "Game of Thrones". So, they decide to take the initiative and make their version of "Game of Thrones" for adults. You have tried an interesting card game called "Gumiho". The players are all 32 cards of the seven gods (Igneon, Drogo, Drogon, Rhaegal, Euron, Jon, and Sansa). Your opponent is your opponent's opponent's opponent. PLAYERS ARE

MADE UP OF SIBLINGS. If you are being played by a brother and sister, you are one being as your opponent is also one person in this world. Do not be afraid. BATTLE OF THE GODS The Battle of the Gods has begun. The Seven Gods fight it out against each other. This game contains fantasy as well as violence. You can play a game in your free time, and if you want to take up a hobby, this is the perfect game to play. RAVAGING AND TAKING LIFE The gods have taken the life of many. What will you do when the battle begins? Can you survive in the Battle of the Gods? (You can also watch the TV drama "Game of Thrones" too) 1. Can you see all the cards here? 2. Can you play a game smoothly? 3. How to join in a game? - To join, you just need to make a 'Reservation' - Then, when the game begins, your reservation should be redeemed - If you play with, 'pass', please use a pen (and paper). 4. How to play the game? - The Battle

Elden Ring Can Be as Common or One-of-a-Kind as You Want It to be

Nowhere Common

On October 18, 1942, a piece of mail was sent from Gibraltar to a man named S. V. Serov. S.V.Serov had not picked up any postal carrier in a month, and the letter had been delivered four times by mistake. It was a congratulatory letter, from his family and friends in Russia upon the successful launch of V-2 rockets, and he wished to thank them.

How is it possible, though, for an object to perform such a dangerous journey to Russia thousands of miles away? The V-2 was a 100-meter-tall wooden rocket with a maximum wingspan of about 12 meters. The rocket was built outside of Germany, and fueled with 15 tons of liquid oxygen and 35 tons of Ammonium Perchlorate, which is a crystalline substance more potent than TNT. The V-2's fins and tail—also wood, 1.5 meters long and one meter wide—were attached to a metal body containing 2,930 kilograms of uranium.

Like the nose of most atomic weapons, the V-2's nose was rounded and covered with a big crater. The rocket had to be shut up like a submarine, and so 100 grams of Trinitite—an electrical short-circuiting fuse that recently had been used in the splashdown test of a
