Karaoke is an audio-visual form of entertainment. In a typical karaoke performance, the artist sings along to a pre-recorded music track. In a karaoke performance the user is expected to know the song beforehand and possess certain skills, such as singing and dancing. The user's role is largely one of accompaniment and singing, by which to "launch" the song, while the performer's role is much more akin to that of a stage actor, being the main centre of attention throughout the performance. Karaoke is distinct from another kind of performance, in which a musical composition is sung as a complete work. This is a more traditional form of musical entertainment and music-making, which is still common in some parts of the world and was common in ancient Greece, the Middle Ages and before the advent of the phonograph. Karaoke differs from this, in that the music is only used as an aid, along with a pre-recorded music track. 5ec8ef588b
