Firewall App Blocker is a very efficient and user-friendly application that allows you to set firewall blocking rules without an advanced level of know-how. Traditionally, such a task requires that you perform a number of complex operations, which beginners need extensive guidance for. Using Firewall App Blocker, blocking a certain application through the Windows firewall is an easy and fully automated operation that any computer user, regardless of their level of IT knowledge can carry out. Another advantage of the program is its portability, which means it doesn't require installation and moreover, can be carried on a removable drive and launched on any machine without leaving a footprint on the system's registry. The list of upsides is complemented by an intuitive interface that despite lacking eye candying elements, remains user-friendly throughout your whole experience with it. Adding an application to the block list is possible using the dedicated menu or button, but drag and drop is also supported. The right-click menu will reveal a great deal of options, amongst which the possibility to unblock, remove, rename, block all, run file, open folder location and other useful functions. The whole list can be exported to a INI configuration file and imported at a later time, if you will. You can also reset the Windows firewall settings, but please note that this operation will revert any changes you've made since the OS has been installed. On an ending note, Firewall App Blocker spares you the effort of performing complicated configurations in order to block program files and delivers an easy and user-oriented approach to achieving this in a couple of clicks.
